BIRDS OF PASSAGE (COLOMBIA)

In the 1970s, as an American fueled marijuana boom hits Colombia, farmers quickly turn into seasoned businessmen starting a maize trafficking era known as "La Bonanza Marinorera." In the Guajira desert, one indigenous Wayuu clan takes a leading role guided by matriarch Ursula Puchina, the "Birds of Passage"—drug-runners—face the constant risk of violence and incursion from the outsiders in Northern Colombia. As greed, passion, and honor blend together over the decades, the family's unity, its love, and their ancestral traditions are all put at stake...

EVERYBODY KNOWS (SPAIN)

The story follows Laura (Penelope Cruz), a Spanish woman living in Buenos Aires, who returns with her children to her hometown outside Madrid for a wedding. The mood is festive, and many faces from the past are present for the nuptials, including Paco (Bartem), a longtime friend of the family. When Laura's daughter goes missing, and text messages arrive asking for a ransom, a happy reunion takes a hard turn into nightmare territory, bringing forgotten secrets into the open...

I GIRL (ARGENTINA)

Based on the director's autobiographical experiences, I Girl tells the story of Antonia, a little girl who lives with Pablo and Julia, who seem to be her parents, in an idyllic landscape of lakes, rivers, and forests in southern Argentina. They are not happy, vegetative professionals, prisoners of the system, and have problems with the law. But their existence is more precious than it seems; cabin has no light, gas, or running water, and they are underprepared for the life they envision for themselves. After a tragedy in forces them to leave their idyllic dwelling and actually interact with the bourgeoisie, Antonia's world starts to gradually open...

UN TRADUCTOR (CUBA)

Havana, 1980. Russian therapist professor Malin receives a mysterious note at the university with orders from the government sending him to a local hospital, where he learns he is expected to act as translator between Cuban doctors and the families of patients from the Chernobyl disaster. He eventually becomes deeply devoted to his patients, but his relationships with his grey wife and young son suffer. Meanwhile, he around all of them shifts as the "Special Period"—the economic crisis in Cuba that followed the dissolution of the Soviet Union—begins...

URGENT LOVE (ARGENTINA)

Agustina and her mother, an introverted, sociable fashion designer, have just arrived in the small town of Rosignoble in Argentina. Her mother's messy love life has caused Agustina to develop a mental block when it comes to boys. Pedro, a teenage "loser", falls in love with her and gradually manages to chip away at the emotional wall Agustina has erected. Urgent Love is a subtle, intelligent and entertaining comedy that dares to be different...

"Potosí, Treasury of the World: Silver, Technological Innovation, and Environmental Degradation in Sixteenth-Century South America"

Dr. Kris Lane

History, Tulane University

October 2 at 4PM in Robeson Hall 210

Soon after the Spanish conquest of the Inca Empire in the Andes region of South America in the early 1530s, an indigenous prospector hit pay dirt in what is today Bolivia. The great Potosí silver bonanza, which began in 1545, vastly expanded the world's silver supply, but on the ground and underground, it also presented numerous technical challenges. This lecture focuses on key technical innovations during this crucial chapter in the history of global capitalism and their consequences, both expected and unforeseen.

This talk is open to all Virginia Tech and Blacksburg community members. Please contact polanco@vt.edu with any questions.

Mark Weiss- "A talk on translation"

Double Punishment?
U-Visa Certification Challenges in a
Multilayered Jurisdictional Patchwork

Do you cooperate with ICE? Do you certify U-Visas?

These two questions were often asked of local law enforcement in community meetings throughout North Carolina, but could easily be asked in any community meeting across the country. The first typically prompted an initial yes or no response with limited details—particularly if the community members in attendance were satisfied by the response. The second often was met with additional commentary and information of personnel that could assist in the process. After the 2006 presidential election, more of these local conversations occurred throughout the state in an attempt to curb the fears activated by blatant anti-immigrant and xenophobic rhetoric. Although many scholars focus on the immigration enforcement patchwork (Decker 2012; Pedraza 2013) implied by the first community question, little focus has turned to the role these same offices may have in processes that may be considered more “pro”-immigrant, such as assisting in the process to apply for certain non-immigrant visas.
