First and foremost, I would like to thank my Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, without whom all endeavors are futile. In addition, I would like to thank the members of my committee: to Dr. Oehlschlaeger for his guidance, to Dr. Colaianne for his initial and continued interest in this research, and to Dr. Sorrentino for his support. I would also like to thank Dr. Radcliffe for his confidence that the project was a worthy one. Thanks also to my parents; no son could have better parents than I have had. Finally, I wish to thank my family: to my lovely wife, Maria, and to my children, Ralph Selig and Kharissa Yalena, for their never-ending love and support.

Of course, any errors, omissions, or other defects are the sole responsibility of the author.
