

The problem of connectivity
A sociological study of the problem of connectedness of nationally produced science and national needs in Saudi Arabia

By

Abdusslam Wail Y. Assuliman

Dissertation submitted to the faculty of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree of

Doctor of Philosophy in Sociology

Ellsworth Fuhrman, Chair
Carol A. Bailey
Daniel Breslau
Michael Hughes
John Ryan

May 2, 2007
Blacksburg, Virginia

Keywords: Sociology of science, Science in less developed countries, World System theory and the diffusion of science, Saudi Arabia, Science and development, Social studies of engineering