

Acknowledgments

I would like to express my deep appreciation to my advisor, Dr. D. Earl Kline for his support, encouragement, and guidance in the pursuit of my Ph.D. Without Dr. Kline's support this work would not have been possible. Thanks to Dr. R. W. Conners for his help and suggestions. Thanks also to Dr. D. Schmoldt, Dr. F. Lamb, and Dr. G. Ifju for serving on my committee and for their helpful comments.

I would also like to thank Paul LaCasse for his help during the initial development of the scanning parameters and image collection. I am grateful of the staff of the Brooks Forest Products Center, in particular, Harrison Sizemore, Carlile H. Price, Kenneth L. Albert for their assistance in sample preparation, and overall support. I also thank the USDA Forest Service, Southern Research Station for providing financial assistance towards my research.

I would especially like to thank my parents, Edward and Barbara Bond, and my brother Douglas Bond, for providing encouragement, support, and motivation throughout my studies.
