

Fabric: The Street

Two units create a third entity - the street.

Through the replication of this unit synthesis the external "streets" are formed. Each unit has several variables that can influence its final form, but as each is generated next to, across from, or skewed to the others, moments of synthesis are brought into being.

Influenced by the topology, the existing structure and fabric of the site establish the complementing of the new to the old. The street is the unit's in-between. The union of the units.

