Terry Lo was born the second of three brothers in Columbus, Ohio on June 26, 1971. He attended the Ohio State University as a National Merit Scholar and received a B.S. in Molecular Genetics and a B.S. in Psychology. He began his graduate studies at the Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University Biology Department and later, transferred to the Virginia-Maryland College of Veterinary Medicine to study with Dr. Thomas Inzana. His graduate research has included the cloning of restriction and methyltransferase genes and the identification of microorganisms by the polymerase chain reaction.

Terry intends to apply his scientific knowledge in a business career and hopes to retire early to join a rock-and-roll band.
