

Informant Contacts

Interviewees in the summer of 2001, and on-going contacts in China. They provide their expertized opinions on further readings on economy, environment, and urban planning issues, information of the case studies, details of sites and projects that they participated, their insights on future development trends, and impressions on comparing different cities and areas. Zhen Fuchun provides information for an important comparison between PRD and Yangtze River Basin in terms of the FDI and environmental variables that I am interested in, particularly as related to different government approaches in the two areas. Journals of these interviews are available on request.
