CHOICE, CHANCE, OR CIRCUMSTANCE: A QUALITATIVE STUDY OF NEVER-MARRIED AND ONCE-MARRIED WOMEN'S MARRIAGE BELIEFS IN MIDLIFE

By

Karla S. Soukup

Thesis submitted to the Faculty of the

Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University

in partial fulfillment of the requirements

for the degree of

MASTER OF SCIENCE

in

Family and Child Development

APPROVED:

______________________________
Katherine R. Allen, Ph.D.
Chair

______________________________  _____________________________
Rosemary Blieszner, Ph.D.             Michael J. Sporakowski, Ph.D.

April 15, 1998

Blacksburg, Virginia
CHOICE, CHANCE, OR CIRCUMSTANCE: A QUALITATIVE STUDY OF NEVER-MARRIED AND ONCE-MARRIED WOMEN’S MARRIAGE BELIEFS IN MIDLIFE

By
Karla S. Soukup

Katherine R. Allen, Chair

Department of Family and Child Development
Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University

(ABSTRACT)

Although previous research on singlehood has often focused on middle-class career women, little is known about the life experiences of non-career path single women. This study examined the core marriage beliefs of never-married and once-married child-free, midlife women and the ways in which those beliefs have evolved over time. The sample consisted of 10 women, 5-never married and 5 once-married, between the ages of 35 and 48. For the purposes of this inquiry, non-career path was codetermined on the basis of occupation and educational background.

The theoretical framework that guided this study combined a life course approach with a feminist perspective. Respondents were recruited through extensive networking and the sampling technique of snowballing. A qualitative methodology was employed utilizing the research strategy of in-depth interviewing. Data were analyzed on the basis of emergent themes and patterns.

This study produced 3 salient findings. First, the process of forming core marriage beliefs is similar between never-married and once-married women. Although an experience of marrying (or an experience of not marrying) may change the way a woman views herself within the context of her marital beliefs, those core marital beliefs do not necessarily change. Second, whether never-married or once-married, single midlife women live ambivalent lives: acknowledging their singlehood status while simultaneously remaining hopeful of attaining a marital union. Finally, women made a clear distinction between getting married and marrying successfully. While most believed getting married was a choice, having a successful marriage was a result of chance. Despite this appraisal, the ideal of marriage remained pervasive, regardless of age or past experiences.
TABLE OF CONTENTS

ABSTRACT ii

I. INTRODUCTION 1
   Purpose of the Study 1
   Rationale for the Study 2
   Theoretical Framing 3
   Sensitizing Concepts 4
   Research Direction 6

II. THEORETICAL FRAMEWORK AND LITERATURE REVIEW 7
   Theoretical Perspectives 7
      A Feminist Perspective 7
      A Life Course Perspective 8
   Review of Literature 10
      Breaking the Yardstick – Single Women in a Married World 10
      Off-time, But Not Out of Place – Single Women in Midlife 12
      Expanding Life Goals 13
      Relinquishing the Fantasy 14
      Defining the Meaning of Work 14
      Creating an Authentic Life 14
      Defining a Place in the Family of Origin 15
      Empirical Studies of Single Women 15
   Summary 20

III. METHODOLOGY 21
   Overview of Research Design 21
   A Foot In Each Camp 22
   Sample Selection and Recruitment 23
   Sample Description 26
   Instrumentation 28
   Pilot Study 28
   Data Collection 29
   Data Analysis 30
   Summary 31

IV. FINDINGS 32
   Mystique of Marriage 33
      The Expectation 34
      A Mixed Message – Marriage Solves Everything/ Marriage is Hard Work
Anybody Can Get Married but Good Marriages Are Rare
Realities for Single Women at Midlife
How I Define Myself
Work --What I Do, Not My Identity
Creating Family Roles Beyond Wife and Mother
Altering the Script to Fit the Story -- The Creative Use of Language, Humor, and Self-Reflection in Dealing with Aloneness
Childhood Memories
Child’s Play
Fairy Tales and Fantasies
I Always Thought I’d Get Married Versus I Never Wanted to Get Married
Family Messages
Messages from Parents
Messages from Extended Family
Lessons I Learned Within My Family
Perspectives From The Never-Married and The Once-Married
Not Everyone’s Meant to be Married
Marriage Was a Mistake
I Never Would Have Left the Marriage
Growing Up But Not Necessarily Growing Older
Physical Changes but Increasing Wisdom
As Old As You Act and Feel or Not Ready For The Cemetery Yet
Surviving Stigmas, Living with Loss, Coping with Loneliness
Assumptions about Singlehood
Not Wanting to Have Children Versus Not Wanting to be Married
Imaginary Lives or “What If”
Dealing with Affection Needs
Coping with Singlehood or “Getting to Okay”
Letting Go of the Fantasy of Marriage but Hanging onto the Dream
Single By Default But Still Hoping for A Miracle
Between Marriage and Singlehood

V. DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

Overview
Discussion
Salient Findings
Different but Similar
Ambivalent Lives
Embeddedness of Marriage
Reflections on the Research Experience
Conclusions
Limitations