ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This study was completed with the assistance of many individuals who deserve recognition for their interest and help with this study. My sincere appreciation is expressed to the following people:

Dr. Denise Brochetti, major professor, for her constant guidance, encouragement, and patience throughout my thesis and graduate work;

Dr. Eleanor Schlenker, committee member, for her knowledge and suggestions throughout the completion of this thesis;

Dr. Susan Duncan, for the advice and support she provided as a committee member;

The Agricultural Experiment Station and the Center for Gerontology, Virginia Tech, for funding this project;

Mike Weiglein, Laura Webb, Stacey Slipakof, and Julie Mackin, for their willing assistance in recruiting focus group participants at the following schools: The College of William and Mary, University of Virginia, James Madison University, and Virginia Tech;

The college women who participated in the focus groups for sharing their ideas;

Leslie Hagy, graduate student, my good friend and assistant moderator;

Ellen Hempfling, undergraduate student, for her work in checking the accuracy of the transcripts;

Sherry Terry, Mary Taylor, and Sherry Saville, HNFE secretaries, whose knowledge and patience in answering all my questions were never ending;

My friends in the graduate office, for their understanding, support, and sense of humor; and

My family for their love and support, with a special thanks to my parents, Dick and Margaret Weiglein, who have been a constant source of strength and encouragement to me.
