

Archivist's Annual Report 2005

October 30, 2005

The International Archive of Women in Architecture grew by 67.5 cubic feet (cf), with the creation of seven new collections and additions to 15 existing collections. Largely due to supplemental library funding for architecture graduate student assistants and a grant from the Beverly Willis Architectural Foundation, 15 collections (35 cf) were processed and have detailed finding aids. The IAWA now has 290 collections (~1200 cf).

Eleven new titles were donated and we purchased 11 more to be added to the Rare Book Room. Additional information about women in architecture is available in the IAWA Biographical Database. 631 women represent 48 countries and 42 of the United States. There are 1195 images from 28 IAWA collections available to the public online through the VT ImageBase.

Two federal grant proposals, potentially bringing $511,000 into the library, were submitted to the National Endowment for the Humanities and to the National Historical Records and Publications Commission, to improve access to the IAWA through processing, preserving, and digitizing collections.

PROCESSING

Graduate students from Virginia Tech's Department of Architecture were largely responsible for processing 15 collections and are currently working on: Eleanore Pettersen Architectural Archive (350 cf) and Zelma Wilson Collection (80 cf). All processed collections are described in detailed finding aids that comply with the "Standard Series" architectural records processing guidelines¹ and EAD tagging and formatting.²

We are fortunate that the Interim Manuscripts Archivist, Amy Shaffer, brings German language skills to the job. We called on two other VT faculty to help with translations: Shoshana Slawny-Levitan, Foreign Languages, helped identify Oron drawings, and Monica Gibson, Director of Student Services at the Graduate School and a native speaker of Hungarian, translated Nanasy's list of buildings.

ELEANORE PETTERSEN ARCHITECTURAL ARCHIVE, 1950-2003. 365 cu. ft.

Former IAWA Archivist Jennifer Meehan moved to the Smithsonian's Archives of American Art in Washington, DC, last September after processing the project files (50 cf). Manuscripts Archivist Amy Shaffer organized Rm. 101A (where most of Pettersen archives are housed) and moved all of her drawings into drawers. She processed the personal, office, and professional/association files along with related oversize materials and created a preliminary organization of all photographs and slides. Over 80 boxes are now processed, and more have preliminary organization. Electronic data from the hundreds of diskettes in the collection were transferred to DLA computers for access and preservation. The 17 architectural models were unpacked to assess their condition. Shaffer refined the processing plan with time and supply estimates and ordered additional supplies for the next processing phases. A student assistant is currently sorting the drawings and collecting data from the title blocks to create a detailed project inventory. Some additional work on the collection is planned for this fall and winter, though no other major work will be undertaken until the NEH or NHPRC grants are awarded.

GRANTS

The Beverly Willis Architectural Foundation awarded DLA $2000 to improve access to the IAWA collections. Graduate architecture students worked 182 hours, primarily Kristin Maki who upgraded information in the IAWA Biographical Database and helped process eight collections.

The BWAF also offered $5000 in matching funds. Before the departure of the library's development officer, we compiled a mailing list of all living donors of IAWA collections. Dean Hitchingham is committed to following through with this solicitation.

DLA faculty Gail McMillan, Amy Shaffer, and Eve Trager worked throughout the year to prepare and submit two grant proposals to federal agencies for funding to provide access to additional IAWA collections through processing and preservation.

1. Following the unsuccessful proposal to the NEH that Jennifer Meehan and Gail McMillan submitted July 2004, McMillan met with the Senior Program Officer at NEH. Based on the excellent reviews of that proposal and this discussion, we submitted a revised grant proposal to NEH in July 2005. (See description attached.) With this grant we would process seven IAWA collections, including the remainder of the Pettersen collection and the large Louise Hall Papers (85 cf). NEH will announce awards in March 2006.

Total budget: $605,578 (NEH funding: $378,072; VT cost share: $218,506)

2. In October, we submitted a proposal to the National Historical Publications and Records Commission (NHPRC), a federal granting agency associated with the National Archives. (See summary attached.) This grant would provide for processing the rest (about 2/3) of the Eleanore Pettersen Architectural Archive collection. A feature of this proposal would be the creation of an advisory board of faculty, practitioners, and researchers to help us determine criteria for the digitization. Prior to submitting our proposal to the NHPRC, we made a slide presentation at the May meeting of the Virginia State Historical Records Advisory Board in Williamsburg. SHRAB was very enthusiastic about our proposal so we will receive their strong support. NHPRC will announce awards in May 2006.

Total budget: $256,303 (NHPRC funding: $132,543; VT cost share: $123,760)
