

Prism generally does not accept unsolicited feature articles. We do, however, welcome submissions of essays for our Last Word page. These should be about 675 words and present an argument that generates discussion. Topics are left up to the authors, but should be of interest to engineering educators. Articles are chosen based on the importance or timeliness of the issues raised, clarity, and quality of presentation. They can be submitted either by text email or email with an attachment in Word.

Please allow at least 12 weeks for your submission to complete the review process. Every article submitted to ASEE Prism is reviewed carefully by the magazine's editorial staff. During this time, your article should not be submitted elsewhere and should not be already under consideration by another publication. Once your submission has completed the review process, we will notify you in writing whether your article has been accepted or rejected for publication in ASEE Prism.

Copyright Policy

It is ASEE's policy to own the copyright to material published in ASEE Prism. By submitting an outline or a manuscript, you, the author(s) agree that the copyright for the article will be transferred to the publisher if and when the article is accepted for publication. (Upon acceptance, an editorial staff member will send you a Transfer of Copyright form.) As the author(s), you retain rights to the fair use of the paper, such as in teaching and other nonprofit uses.
