From June 12 to 15 Barbara Allen, Science, Technology, and Society, conducted a seminar, “Introduction to Community-Based Participatory Research,” to introduce researchers to community-based participatory research for health. The four-day training event was hosted at the Institute for Advanced Study (IMéRA) in Marseille, France. Assisting Allen was the rest of the Fos “Etude participative en santé environnement ancrée localement” (Locality-based Participatory Environmental Health Survey) research team. The training was available at no cost to the 20 French researchers and public health officials who participated, thanks to support from the Agence nationale de sécurité sanitaire de l’alimentation, de l’environnement et du travail (Agency for Food, Environmental and Occupational Health).

Paul Avey, Political Science, was the recipient of an International Affairs Fellowship for the 2018–2019 academic year. The fellowship is awarded by the Council on Foreign Relations every year to a select group of academics, policy-makers, diplomats, and military officials. The focus of Avey’s research is nuclear politics, U.S. foreign policy, and international relations theory.
ASPECT doctoral student Nada Berrada presented “Representing Youth of the MENA Region: Discursive Implications of Youth as a Category” at the World Congress for Middle Eastern Studies, which was held July 14–22 in Seville, Spain.

Daniel Breslau, Associate Professor and Chair of the Department of Science, Technology, and Society, was interviewed for a report titled “Blockchain Technology Could Revolutionize More than the Financial World,” which was broadcast on WVTF, the local National Public Radio affiliate, on May 25.

Hamish Brewer, a doctoral student in Educational Leadership, was recognized as the 2018 Northern Virginian of the Year. Hamish recently assumed the position of principal at Fred M. Lynn Middle School in Woodbridge and was the 2017 National Distinguished Principal for Virginia.

Glenn Bugh, History, was elected to the Executive Committee of the Managing Committee of the American School of Classical Studies in Athens, Greece. The Executive Committee administers an endowment of $170 million in collaboration with a Board of Trustees.

The College is delighted to welcome the following tenure-track and tenured professors. Joining as Assistant Professors are: Andrea Baldwin, Sociology; Koeun Choi, Human Development and Family Science; Carolyn Commer, English; Amanda Demmer, History; Megan Duncan, Communication; Bikrum Gill, Political Science/ASPECT Core Faculty; Tameka Grimes, School of Education; Scotty Hardwig, School of Performing Arts; Bryan Klausmeyer, Modern and Classical Languages and Literatures; Karen Kovaka, Philosophy; Alan Lumba, History; Justin Perkinson, School of Performing Arts; Desiree Poets, Political Science/ASPECT Core Faculty; Audrey Reeves, Political Science/ASPECT Core Faculty; Jody Russon, Human Development and Family Science; Balbir Singh, Religion and Culture/ASPECT Core Faculty; Jessica Taylor, History; Tingting Zhao, Modern and Classical Languages and Literatures. Derek Mueller, English, was hired as tenured faculty at the rank of Associate Professor.

The Communications Team of the College of Liberal Arts and Human Sciences – Paula Byron, Director of Marketing and Communications, Leslie King, Manager of Marketing and Communications, and Adnan Saeed, Web Applications Analyst – has developed a news site to complement the College’s main website and highlight information included in News2Note. Each academic unit in the College has its own news pages, linked from the left-hand navigation of the department homepages. The site includes stories about alumni, faculty, and students; academic and philanthropy news; calendar listings; academic news briefs; media mentions; and a bookshelf that features the covers of authored and edited books by College faculty, with links to detailed information. Faculty are encouraged to submit books and media mentions following instructions on the Marketing and Communications page of the College’s main website.
Creative Technologies in Music was introduced as a new option in the bachelor's degree in music. The program is one of the first of its kind to receive accreditation through the National Association of Schools of Music. Students can choose to pursue electroacoustic composition, research, or both options.

ASPECT doctoral student Linea Cutter presented “Democratic Deliberation and Neoliberal Hegemony: The Role of NGOs in Civil Society” at the International Studies Association Conference, which took place April 3–7 in San Francisco, California.

Amelia Dirks, a recent VT graduate of both the Creative Writing and the Literature and Language programs, was awarded a Fulbright English Teaching Assistant grant. She will teach at the Hellenic-American Educational Foundation in Athens, Greece.

An EcoCAR 3 team from Virginia Tech comprised of Department of Communication majors and College of Engineering students won first-place honors in overall project management, closeout report, execution plan, vehicle handling, 0–60 mph acceleration, emissions, energy consumption, well-to-wheel criteria emissions, and autocross, where drivers test vehicle handling and performance on a closed course; they also placed second in several other events, posting a fourth-place finish overall. The competition was sponsored by the U.S. Department of Energy and General Motors.

The following faculty and staff were recognized at the Virginia Tech Employee Development Certificate Program ceremony for completion of requirements for one or more programs during the 2017–2018 academic year: Administrative Professional Development Program Certificate: Wanda McAlexander, School of Education; Diversity Advocate Certificate: Christy Dillon, School of Education, Dawn Knight-Withers, School of Education, Amanda Villar, Religion and Culture; Diversity Ally Certificate: Dawn Knight-Withers, School of Education, Adrianne Pinkney, School of Education, Amanda Villar, Religion and Culture; Diversity Ambassador Certificate: Sally Shupe, English; and Office Software Skills Certificate: Demetria Harris, Communication.

ASPECT doctoral student Rob Flahive presented “Preservation Power: Re-Aestheticizing Spatial Order of Colonial Casablanca” at the European Workshops in International Studies Meeting, which took place June 6–9 in Groningen, Netherlands. In addition, Flahive published “Regime-Security Urbanism: Cairo 2050 and Beyond in al-Sisi’s Cairo,” Jadaliyya, July 17, 2018, online.

The comments of United States soldiers in World War II are the focus of research and a transcription project led by Edward Gitre, History, with support from the National Endowment for the Humanities. Gitre’s work is described in an interview titled “What They Were Thinking:
“WWII Soldiers’ Insights to Become Public Data Base,” which was broadcast on WVTF, the local National Public Radio affiliate, on May 8.

Rosemary Goss, Residential Property Management Advisory Board Professor in the Department of Apparel, Housing, and Resource Management, was honored on the occasion of her retirement at the end of last semester after 42 years at Virginia Tech. The endowed professorship she has held since 1996 was renamed the Property Management Advisory Board Professorship in Honor of Dr. Rosemary C. Goss.

The following individuals were presenters at the Virginia Tech Graduate Education Summer conference: Jennifer Lawrence, English faculty member and Director of the Writing Center; Jordan Laney, ASPECT doctoral student and Religion and Culture faculty member; and doctoral students Joanie Banks-Hunt, Curriculum and Instruction, Leigh McKagen, ASPECT, Karen Raymond, Counselor Education, Faith Skiles, ASPECT, Anthony Szczurek, ASPECT, and Jennifer Turner, Sociology. The conference took place June 12–14.

Michael Hughes, Sociology, gave a keynote address at the Sixteenth International Conference on Social Stress Research in Athens, Greece, on June 2. The title of his talk was “The Racial Paradox in Mental Health.”

The following graduate students in the College presented papers at the Human Futures and Intelligent Machines Summit, hosted by the Center for Humanities at Virginia Tech June 7–9: Joshua Earle, Science, Technology, and Society, “Morphology Freedom”; Mario Khreiche, ASPECT, “Microlabor as Automation in Amazon Mechanical Turk”; Emma Stamm, ASPECT, “The Unthinkable: Data, Mentality and Politics”; and Damien Williams, “Values and Interdisciplinarity in Technological Design.”

Sylvester Johnson, Religion and Culture and Director of the Center for Humanities, was awarded $2,500 from the Virginia Humanities Foundation for a collaborative public humanities summit between Virginia Union University (VUU) and Virginia Tech titled “Addressing Inequality: History, Social Disparity, and the Beloved Community Initiative.” Johnson serves as Principal Investigator and Ralph Hall, School of Public and International Affairs (SPIA), as co-Principal Investigator. The event will take place at VUU’s Richmond campus in November and is part of SPIA’s Beloved Community Initiative to advance more effective strategies to address inequality in Virginia.

Kevin Krrost, a doctoral student in Education Research and Evaluation, served as a Summer Associate at the Institute for Defense Analyses (IDA) in Alexandria, Virginia, in the Operational Evaluation Division. The IDA provides objective analyses of national security issues and related national challenges, particularly those requiring special scientific and technical expertise.

Multimedia Journalism students are eligible to apply for a new merit-based scholarship, the Kathryn Thompson Leckie Memorial Scholarship. The scholarship was established by Communication alumna Carolyn Smith Corsi (1983), who was Leckie’s roommate. Leckie’s career as an investigative journalist included stints with the Richmond Times-Dispatch, the Honolulu Star-Bulletin, and the Frederick (Maryland) News-Post; she died in 2012. In May 2018 Gretchen Kernbach, a senior Multimedia Journalism major, became the first recipient of the scholarship.

Eric Lyon, School of Performing Arts, was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship to conduct spatial audio research. The yearlong fellowship provides Lyon with support to produce three multichannel compositions for the Cube in the Moss Arts Center; these are complemented by “Marimbas Everywhere,” which he created for the Virginia Tech Percussion Ensemble and which had its premiere in April. The spatial orchestration Lyon employs in his compositions allows for the pieces to be rewritten for each performance space and speaker array. The Guggenheim Foundation funds only 175 of its applications – usually more than 3,000 – each year; in 2018 there were just a dozen winners in music composition. Lyon, who joined the Virginia Tech community in 2013, earned his bachelor’s degree from Princeton University, a master’s from the Eastman School of Music, and a doctorate from the University of California at San Diego.

ASPECT doctoral student Leigh McKagen presented “Exploring Imperial Narratives in Star Trek: Voyager” at the Science Fiction Research Association Conference, which took place July 1–4 in Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Polly Middleton has been named Director of the Marching Virginians, only the fifth director in the band’s 44-year history. Middleton served as Director of Athletics Bands at Arkansas State University for a year and another as Director of Illinois State University’s marching band. She previously held the position of Associate Director of Athletic Bands at Virginia Tech. Middleton earned her bachelor’s and doctoral degrees at the University of Illinois and her master’s degree from Indiana University.

The College is pleased to welcome Christina Miller as Director of Alumni Relations. In her new role, Miller will organize events, provide opportunities for networking with the College’s more than 60,000 graduates, and create relationship-building outreach and programming. Miller most recently served as Associate Director of Alumni Relations at Juniata College in Huntingdon, Pennsylvania. She earned her bachelor’s degree and master’s degree from Juniata College.

Marian Mollin, History, co-edited The Religious Left in Modern America: Doorkeepers of a Radical Faith, Palgrave Studies in the History of Social Movements (Basingstoke, United Kingdom: Palgrave Macmillan, 2018), with Leilah Danielson and Doug Rossinow. Her individual contribution to the volume was “Ita Ford and the Spirit of Social Change,” pp. 255–76. In addition, the research of students enrolled in HIST 2984 A Nation Divided: America in the 1960s, taught by Mollin, was featured in an exhibit in Newman Library. Sixteen posters designed by students presented sample themes and issues that defined student life at Virginia Tech during the Sixties. The exhibit, a collaboration with University Libraries Special Collections, is on display from May 15 until August 10.

All issues of News2Note, beginning with the first from February 2008, are available through VTechWorks, Virginia Tech’s open access institutional repository.

Su Fang Ng, Clifford A. Cutchins III Professor in the Department of English, was awarded a Learn German in Germany grant from the German Academic Exchange Service (Deutscher Akademischer Austauschdienst) to attend an intensive language course at the Goethe-Institut in Dresden, Germany, from July 2 to 26. Ng was selected so that she could improve her German skills in order to take into account German Orientalists in her study of early modern European Orientalists in Asia.

Two music compositions by Charles Nichols, School of Performing Arts, were premiered in June. His piece Tsuga, for solo piano, jointly commissioned by the Iowa Music Teachers Association and the Music Teachers National Association as a result of a competition cosponsored by the Iowa Composers Forum, was performed by Richard Steinbach on June 3 in Iowa City, Iowa. At the performance, Nichols was recognized with the Distinguished Composer of the Year award by the Iowa Music Teachers Association and the Iowa Composers Forum. His Bluestone, for alto saxophone, electric guitar, piano, and drum set, commissioned by the Charlotte New Music Festival, had its premiere by the Hypercube ensemble on June 29 in Charlotte, North Carolina.

School of Performing Arts faculty members Richard Masters and Amanda Nelson published “Rethinking the College Summer Intensive: A New Model for Collaboration,” Stage Directors and Choreographers Society Journal 6.3 (Spring 2018): 44–49.

ASPECT doctoral student Mary Ryan presented “The Kerner Commission, White Supremacy, and Lingered Democratic Dystopia” at the International Social Theory Consortium Conference, which was held May 17–19 at Loyola University in Chicago, Illinois; and “Race, Democracy, and the Kerner Commission” with Wendy Brown at the 2018 Master Class on the theme “Where Liberal Democracy Once Was: Liberal Authoritarianism in the Twenty-First Century,” held May 28–June 1 in Lucerne, Switzerland.

Michael Saffle, Religion and Culture, presented the keynote address at the XI Simposio internacional “La creación musical en la banda sonora,” held in conjunction with the 10th Meeting of the Music and Media Study Group of the International Musicological Society June 13–16 in Salamanca, Spain. The title of the address was “New Music for Today’s Science-fiction Films.”
A Bachelor of Arts and a Bachelor of Science degree program in Science, Technology, and Society were approved by the Board of Visitors at its June meeting. The programs, which will help students develop new ways of understanding and intervening in the relationship of science and technology to society, will begin in Spring 2019, pending approval of the State Council of Higher Education for Virginia.

Ashley Shew, Science, Technology, and Society, was awarded a National Science Foundation CAREER Grant for $441,426 for “Disability, Experience, and Technological Imagination.” The project focuses on discrepancies between how scientists and engineers understand and explain their work related to disability and the actual needs and wants of people with disabilities. As part of the grant, Shew will work with colleagues in the College of Engineering in 2019 through Virginia Tech’s STEMABILITY, a summer camp for students with disabilities.

Sociology faculty member Neal King and doctoral students Jessica Herling, Talitha Rose, and Rayanne Streeter published Gender in Film and Video (New York: Routledge, 2019).

During its June meeting the Virginia Tech Board of Visitors conferred the emeritus title on Charles Taylor, Professor of Political Science. Taylor pursued scholarship related to the analysis of political and social stability across nation-states, with a focus on quantitative indicators of political and social conditions and on methodological techniques for employing such data. He served as Head of the Department of Political Science and was instrumental in creating the International Studies program in the department. For his contributions to the university he was recognized with the Alumni Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Advising and the Alumni Award for International Outreach. Taylor joined the Virginia Tech community in 1970; he earned his bachelor’s degree from Carson Newman College and a master’s degree and Ph.D. from Yale University.

Pamela Teaster, Director of the Center for Gerontology and Professor of Human Development, was the recipient of the Isabella Horton Grant Guardianship Award. Sponsored by the Rutter Group and administered by the National College of Probate Judges, the “Isabella” is given in recognition of individual achievements in the field of guardianships of adults and/or minors based on activities such as innovative programs leading to improvements in guardianship laws; articles, treatises, books, or other publications of unusual quality and impact on guardianship issues; and leadership roles or other activities in organizations that have led to significant improvements in the laws, administration, or practices in the guardianship field. Teaster received the award at the Spring Conference of the National College of Probate Judges, which was held May 2–5 in San Diego.

The College is pleased to announce the following tenure and promotion decisions by the Virginia Tech Board of Visitors at its June 6 meeting. Promoted to Associate Professor with tenure were: Danna Agmon, History and ASPECT Core Faculty; Amy Azano, School of Education; Maríá del Carmen Caña Jiménez, Modern and Classical Languages and Literatures; Jason Crafton, School of Performing Arts; Erika Grafsky, Human Development and Family Science; Stefanie Hofer, Modern and Classical Languages and Literatures; Eunju Hwang, Apparel, Housing, and Resource Management; Benjamin Jantzen, Philosophy; Melanie Kiechle, History; Christine Labuski, Sociology; Philip Olsen, Science, Technology, and Society; Dustin Read, Apparel, Housing, and Resource Management; Nadine Sinno, Modern and Classical Languages and Literatures; Trevor Stewart, School of Education; Catherine Ulrich, School of Education; LaDale Winling, History; and Haiyan Zhu, Sociology. Promoted to the rank of Professor in the past academic year were: Janet Abbate, Science, Technology, and Society; April Few-Demo, Human Development and Family Science; Matthew Gabriele, Religion and Culture; James Ivory, Communication; Gerard Lawson, School of Education; Heidi Anne Mesmer, School of Education; Lydia Patton, Philosophy; Tina Savla, Human Development and Family Science; and John Wells, School of Education. Also recognized with promotion were the following: Joseph Scallorns, English, to Senior Instructor; Matthew Goodrum, Science, Technology, and Society, to Collegiate Associate Professor; and Peggy Quesenberry, Apparel, Housing, and Resource Management, to Collegiate Assistant Professor.

The College notes with sadness the death of Kathleen Wright Wampler on June 20. Wampler was an extension specialist and faculty member in Family and Child Development. She dedicated her life to serving children and families and even after retiring from Virginia Tech in 1983 continued to volunteer two mornings each week at the Virginia Tech Child Development Center for Learning and Research.

The centennial of the death of Captain Lloyd Williams, the first Virginia soldier killed on the frontlines in France, on June 12 was commemorated as part of the VPI in World War One project that the Department of History has coordinated for several years. The project chronicles VPI’s involvement in World War One by documenting the lives of men who served. The research has been carried out entirely by students, mostly students in the department’s First Year Experience course taught by Trudy Becker. The leader of the project, Daniel Newcomb, has earned three degrees from the College; he worked with Associate Dean and Professor of History Tom Ewing to design the initial research protocols and then guided two classes of first-year students as part of his graduate assistantship in the Department of History.

Please submit items for inclusion in upcoming News2Note newsletters to Associate Dean Debra Stoudt at dstoudt@vt.edu.