Chapter 1

Introduction

Historical Background

The decade's most significant development in analyzing and understanding interests of people was inaugurated by the psychologists at Carnegie Institute of Technology following the first world war. Bruce Moore discovered that two types of engineers could be better differentiated in terms of interests than in any other way. M. J. Ream tried to differentiate successful and unsuccessful life insurance salesmen by this procedure. Max Freyd improved the technique and found that life insurance salesmen and engineers could be so differentiated. The studies of D. B. Craig, R. M. Hubbard, and E. A. Gaw have indicated that either interests are not very significant in certain connections, or improvements in technique must be made.

E. K. Strong, Jr., brought this research problem with him to Standord University. There K. M. Cowdery showed in his thesis that engineers, lawyers, and physicians could be very clearly differentiated on the basis of interests. Cowdery made a very genuine contribution when he adapted a statistical formula of T. M. Kelley's to the scoring of the blank. Strong extended the scope of the work to include seventeen occupations. It then became evident that Cowdery's revision of Freyd's blank was inadequate. The items were not well selected, and there were not enough of them; more important still from the practical standpoint of securing co-operation, the blank contained so many nonsense items that most people refused to take it seriously. The present Vocational Interest Blank is the outgrowth. With its use the characteristic interests of men in thirty individual and different occupations have been determined, and it is possible to ascertain whether or not a given person possesses the interests common to any one of these different groups.

Analyzing the interests of adult men is one thing. The utilization of their characteristic groupings of likes and dislikes for the vocational guidance of younger men is quite another matter. Before the latter can be done it is necessary to know that the interests characteristic of an occupational group are present in its members before they enter the occupation, and are not the resultants of the occupation itself. It is also necessary to ascertain the extent to which interests change with increasing age, when interests are definitely established, and what causes operate in their development.

Mr. Strong's book entitled Change of Interests With Age throws light on the answers to some of these problems. It is primarily concerned with the interests of adult men between the ages of twenty and seventy, respectively, and a particularly large portion is devoted to the question of how these interests change with increasing age. The slight difference found between men of twenty-five and fifty-five years of age makes it clear that interests are not particularly affected by years of activity in a given occupation. In fact, most of the changes from twenty-five to fifty-five are characteristic of all men, regardless of occupation.

At present scales have been developed for use with the Strong Vocational Interest Test in the following occupations: Artist, Psychologist, Architect, Physician, Dentist, Mathematician, Engineer, Chemist, Production Manager, Farmer, Carpenter, Printer, Mathematics-Science Teacher, Policeman, Forest Service Employee, Y.M.C.A. Physical Director, Personnel Worker, Y. M. C. A. General Secretary, Social Science Teacher, City School Superintendent, Minister, Musician, Certified Public Accountant, Office Worker, Purchasing Agent, Banker, Sales Manager, Real-Estate Salesman, Life Insurance Salesman, Advertising Man, Lawyer, Author, Journalist, President of a Manufacturing Concern. In addition, there are scales to determine occupational level, and masculinity-femininity.

What the Strong Vocational Interest Test Is

With Strong's Vocational Interest blank, the attempt is made to discover the interests of a man by getting his reactions to a large sampling of everyday experiences. The blank has been used to determine whether or not a man's interests are in agreement with the average interests of men engaged in the various individual occupations. In essence, it is the purpose of the Strong test to answer the questions: Are your interests similar to the interests of the average doctor? lawyer? minister? With individuals in what vocation do your interests parallel?

There are four hundred items on the blank, to each of which the individual reacts by indicating whether he likes (L), is indifferent to (I), or dislikes it (D). The four hundred items comprise one hundred occupations, (e.g., actor, advertiser, architect, etc.), forty-nine amusements (golf, fishing, hunting, etc.), thirty-six school subjects (algebra, agriculture, arithmetic, etc.), forty-eight activities, (repairing a clock, making a radio set, adjusting a carburetor, etc.), forty-seven peculiarities of people (progressive people, conservative people, energetic people, etc.), eighty miscellaneous items, and forty estimates of present abilities and characteristics (usually start activities of my group, usually drive myself steadily, win friends easily, etc.). The instructions printed at the head of the list of one-hundred occupations are as follows:

"Indicate after each occupation listed below whether you would like that kind of work or not. Disregard considerations of salary, social standing, future advancement, etc. Consider only whether you would like to do what is involved in the occupation.

Draw a circle around L if you like that kind of work
 Draw a circle around I if you are indifferent to that work
 Draw a circle around D if you dislike that kind of work

Work rapidly. Your first impressions are desired here. Answer all of the items. Many of the seemingly trivial and irrelevant items are very useful in diagnosing your real attitude."

Similar instructions are given for each of the remaining sections of the blank, except for the section pertaining to present abilities and characteristics, where the following instructions are used:

"Indicate below what kind of a person you are right now and what you have done. Check in the first column "yes" if the item really describes you, in the third column "no" if the item does not describe you, and in the second column "?" if you are not sure. (Be frank in pointing out your weak points, for selection of a vocation must be made in terms of them as well as of your strong points)"

The Need for This Study

The Department of Agriculture Education at Virginia Polytechnic Institute has used this test for six years, but its value has been limited by reason of the fact that no scale exists for the comparison of the interests of the individual taking the test with those of the average successful agriculture instructor. Heretofore, the Department has had to depend upon the use of a general scale for teachers and one for farmers for scoring purposes. This research project is an attempt to supply the missing link. It is a direct response, therefore, to the need for some scale derived for scoring vocational agriculture teachers in particular, to be used to prognosticate probable success of a given individual in the field of vocational agriculture. So far as this occupation is concerned, therefore, this scale should enable the Strong vocational interest test to answer the questions for a trainee: Do your basic interests correlate with those of successful agriculture instructors? What should be your probable success as an agriculture in-

Procedure Followed in Making This Study

It has been intended to use the test data which had been saved on all regular and summer school students at V.P.I. over a period of years in order to develop a scale which would have prognostic value. The Strong test, however, has now been revised for males, and it would be no longer of practical value to develop a scale based upon the test data which has been accumulated. In determination of this scale for agriculture instructors, therefore, the revised Strong test, Form M, was administered to two hundred one individuals, one hundred fifty three of whom were actively engaged in teaching or supervising vocational agriculture in Virginia; ten of whom were ex-teachers of vocational agriculture, and thirty-eight of whom were trainees who began teaching vocational agriculture in the session of 1939-1940. In the actual development of the scale, only responses for men who were teaching or who had taught agriculture were used, although the responses of the trainees were compiled and are presented in the tables to follow. The data on trainees is presented largely for the purpose of substantiation. It was felt that incorporation of the responses of this group with the responses of the teachers of agriculture would lower the objectivity of the study insofar as rating of the excellence of a teacher of agriculture is concerned. Whereas on the teachers there was procurable a three-way estimate of excellence, i.e., supervisory, teacher-training, and Virginia score-card, there was procurable on the trainees only the estimate of the teacher training staff.

The group of 180 cases used was not large; some of the scales have been developed on three hundred to five hundred cases. However, there is one distinct advantage. There has been no valid method of ranking or selecting cases in preparation of the other scales. In other words, the preparation of a scale for measuring basic interests of doctors utilized no basis upon which successful and unsuccessful doctors could be segregated. In this case, the work of each individual is evaluated and he is classified in one of four quartiles by the three methods noted above. The basis for preparation of this scale, therefore, consists not in merely tabulating the responses of one hundred eighty teachers of agriculture, but in consideration of the discrepancy between responses of the unsuccessful agriculture instructors as contrasted with those of relatively successful teachers. Hence these one hundred eighty instructors should represent or be equivalent to double that number chosen at random. The three criteria used for classifying the instructors and trainees into quartiles may be described as follows:

For the most part, it has been the policy of the state department of vocational education for Virginia to publish each year a so-called score-card, containing objective ratings of all Virginia agriculture departments on the basis of departmental excellence with regard to supervised practice programs, FFA activities, publicity, shop work, etc. For each activity a certain maximum score is obtainable, the maximum total score aggregating one-hundred. For example, one-hundred percent of supervised practice enterprises completed nets the department a score of 10 points; ninety percent completed nine points; eighty percent eight points, etc. It has been found in Virginia through the use of the scorecard that the "man" is the dominant factor in departmental rating, not his community, hence some estimate of the comparative success of the man, at least enough to allow a valid quartile designation, was gleaned from the scorecard over a period of years, from 1936-1939.

Second, a list of names of agriculture instructors in each of the four Virginia supervisory districts was sent to the respective district supervisor over that district, with the request that he divide the group into quartiles on the basis of professional merit. The estimate of the district supervisor with regard to each instructor was then compared with the point score on the score-card explained above. For the most part, the opinions of the state supervisors as to the relative efficiency of their men checked closely with the point standing on the score-card. A few adjustments were made.

Third, a list of all instructors of vocational agriculture in Virginia was submitted to the teacher-training staff at V.P.I., with the request that the men be divided into quartiles on the basis of their worth as agriculture instructors. This estimate was checked against the estimate obtained from the two methods outlined above, and a composite estimate for each man was made for all three. The men were then segregated into four groups: No. 1, superior teachers; No. 2, good teachers; No. 3, fair teachers; No. 4, relatively poor teachers. Responses from various instructors were tabulated by questions, in the quartile in which they had been placed. In derivation of this scale, the first three quartiles were combined and contrasted with the fourth quartile. The degree of basic interest would be the discrepancy between the responses of the upper three quartiles and the lower fourth. After administering this test to an agriculture education trainee, it should be possible to ascertain whether his interests correspond with the interests of successful teachers or those of unsuccessful teachers.

Following the tabulation by ratings, totals for each of the three possible responses were derived for each question, i.e., the total number of men answering L, I, and D for each question in each rating. From these, in turn, were determined the percentage of men of each quartile answering L, answering I, answering D.

Having the percentage of men responding in each possible manner, for each quartile, as well as for the total of the first, second, and third quartiles, the next step was to determine the percentage discrepancy between the responses of quartiles one, two, three, and four, and to set up an arbitrary standard for determining the scale. In other words, if forty-five percent of the 1-2-3 group answered L to question number one, and forty percent of the number four group answered L to the same question, what should be the numerical value to be assigned in the scale to the five percent discrepancy? Five percent discrepancy, it was decided, should be sufficient to indicate some significance, even though the number of cases in group four was small, being only thirty-eight. The following standard was worked out to evaluate discrepancies:

0-5 -- no significance
 5-10 - value of 1
 10-15 - value of 2
 15-20 - value of 3
 20-25 - value of 4
 25-30 - value of 5

If a higher percentage occurred with the 1-2-3 group the particular response bears a plus value. If a higher percentage occurs with the 4 group, the question carries a minus value. A high "plus" final score on the test would tend to indicate that the particular individual taking the test possessed interests correlating closely with those of successful teachers.

In brief, the outline of procedure of this study is practically identical to the thesis outline submitted to the V.P.I. graduate committee. For the sake of clarity, the following abbreviated summary of procedure is given:

1. The Strong Vocational Interest Test, revised Form M, was administered to all employed teachers and supervisors of vocational agriculture in Virginia. This gave one hundred eighty cases for white teachers only.
2. Three year ratings for employed teachers of agriculture were made from the ratings for the three sessions, 1935-1938. These records are in the files of the Department of Vocational Education at Blacksburg.
3. The scheme for rating employed teachers was materially modified for the session 1938-1939. This rating was examined by the supervisory and teacher-training staffs, and organized so as to be combined with all the ratings secured in step 2.

4. All rankings were then organized into quartiles.

5. Relationship was determined between the responses of the upper three quartile group and the lower quartile. If there was found to be a material discrepancy between the responses of the two groups, the interest would probably be a significant one and therefore may be basic in the teaching of agriculture. The test, throughout, calls for a choice between three fixed responses. Each of the three responses was assigned a numerical value for each interest in accordance with the degree with which the interest seemed to be basic. The degree of basic interest is the discrepancy between the responses of the upper three quartile group and the lower quartile, and the degree to which the responses of the two groups of instructors were unanimous within themselves. In the cases with less than five percent discrepancy between the two groups used, the response evaluation would be zero, and no significance could be attached.

Interests in which responses tended to be equally scattered over both groups were assigned little or no value. The responses for each group on each question were tabulated. Individual charts for each question of the vocational interest test were developed, which show the responses of each group for each interest in toto.

6. A scale was then prepared to evaluate the general basic interests of an individual planning to teach agriculture.

5. The basis of responsibility division between the two students was as follows:

Miller--Parts 1,2,3, and 4 of Chapter 2 and Chapter 3.

Glick- -Parts 5,6,7, and 8 of Chapter 2 and Chapter 3
Chapter 1, Chapter 4

In the tables which follow, the maximum percentage of error in computation does not in any case exceed .05 of 1 percent.

In the first table on each of the following pages is shown the response by quartiles; in the second table is contrasted the response of the 1-2-3 group with that of group 4. The responses are shown for both teachers and trainees, but only responses of teachers are used in development of the scale shown under "evaluation" in table 2.

VOCATIONAL INTEREST BLANK FOR MEN (Revised)

By EDWARD K. STRONG, JR.
Professor of Psychology, Stanford University

Published by STANFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS, Stanford University, California

It is possible with a fair degree of accuracy to determine by this test whether one would like certain occupations or not. The test is not one of intelligence or school work. It measures the extent to which one's interests agree or disagree with those of successful men in a given occupation.

Your responses will, of course, be held strictly confidential.

Date.....

- 1. Name.....
- 2. Age..... 3. Sex.....
- 4. Address to which correspondence should be sent.....

If you are still attending school or expect to return to school, answer items 5-12; if you have left school, answer items 13-20.
Any additional remarks may be entered at 21.

- 5. Grade I am now in: Grammar School 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 High School 1 2 3 4 College 1 2 3 4 5 6 7
(PUT A CIRCLE AROUND APPROPRIATE GRADE)
- 6. School grade I expect to complete.....
- 7. School subjects I am now most interested in.....
- 8. School subjects I expect to specialize in later on.....
- 9. Occupation I am planning to enter..... 10. Sure of this..... Not sure.....
- 11. Jobs I have been employed at (e.g., clerical, retail selling, farming, giving number of months employed at each).....

- 12. Occupations I have formerly considered entering.....

To be Answered by Those Who Have Left School

- 13. Last grade you finished in school (e.g., Grammar 6th, High School 2nd, College 4th).....
- 14. What technical or business courses have you taken? (Underline those you finished).....
- 15. Occupation (e.g., Carpenter)..... 16. Years of experience in it.....
- 17. Just what do you do?.....
- 18. Why did you select the above occupation?.....
- 19. What occupations, other than your present one, have you at one time or another engaged in?.....
- 20. What occupations, if any, have you in mind entering? Why?

- 21. Remarks

Part I. Occupations. Indicate after each occupation listed below whether you would like that kind of work or not. Disregard considerations of salary, social standing, future advancement, etc. Consider only whether or not you would like to do what is involved in the occupation. You are not asked if you would take up the occupation permanently, but merely whether or not you would enjoy that kind of work, regardless of any necessary skills, abilities, or training which you may or may not possess.

Draw a circle around L if you like that kind of work

Draw a circle around I if you are indifferent to that kind of work

Draw a circle around D if you dislike that kind of work

Work rapidly. Your first impressions are desired here. Answer all the items. Many of the seemingly trivial and irrelevant items are very useful in diagnosing your real attitude.

Conclusion

Before reliability and validity of any scale can be determined, it must be administered to an adequate number of individuals. Hence use of this scale for evaluation of the basic interests of agriculture instructors must of necessity be of an experimental nature at first. Until it is proven that this scale actually measures what it purports to measure, very little significance should be given to results obtained through its use.

In the case of all other scales used with the Strong test, numerical standards have been determined and set up which make the scale much more valuable. For example, a set of standards similar to the following may be used to determine just what the significance of an individual final score may be:

|------------------------|----|---------------------------------------|
| Final score 200 to 400 | == | very high (A) |
| Final score 100 to 200 | -- | high (B) |
| Final score 0 to 100 | -- | average (C) |
| Final score -100 to 0 | -- | questionable (D) |
| Final score below -100 | -- | of definitely different interests (E) |

If for this scale, reliability and validity can be established, and if definite standards for final scores can be set up by experimentation, as in the example above, then the Strong test will be of value in prognostication of probable success of an individual in teaching agriculture, so far as the factor of basic interests affects success.

The following limitations in the use of this test should be noted:

1. Tests in general may be regarded as indicative of tendencies only and should not be regarded as infallible indicators. Oft times a propensity exists for placing undue emphasis upon test results.

2. The very nature of this test rendered impossible an unequivocally objective treatment of the problem. In the case of some phases of this study, subjective methods had to be used. The worth of a man, for example, can hardly be arrived at objectively.

3. The number of cases, (210), although inclusive of practically all instructors within the state of Virginia, was nevertheless small. Without doubt a larger number would have lent greater value to the study. Addition of trainees of the current year would have swelled the total, had a better system of evaluation of their merits existed.

4. A maximum of .05 of 1 percent error in percentage computation may exist in isolated cases, but inasmuch as a discrepancy of 5. is necessary for a 1 point evaluation, this percentage of error is insignificant.
