Hello Will,

Congratulations on the new job. What's the name of the company and what do you have you doing? In case we need to contact you, do you mind sending me your new contact information? Also, could you send me a copy of your thesis so that we may get a preview of your conclusions?

Regarding the copyright matter, I understand from Stephen that all you need is an email from us stating that you have our consent to use the images. Please consider this response, as written permission from IE to use the images attached in your email.

I hope you found working with SPS interesting and fulfilling.

Best regards,

Angelo

Angelo,

It has been a while since we have corresponded. I started a new job about 3 months ago. Unfortunately I hadn't completed my thesis when I started and things have moved very slow with completing my thesis. I have finished it now, but the Graduate school is very strict with Copyright Laws so that is way I am emailing. I have used two figures in my thesis that were provided by IE.

If

the figures were used in any copyrighted works I would need documented permission by IE to use them. I have attached the two figures to the email in in a word document and I wanted to make sure that they were not copyrighted in any way before I submit my final thesis. The figures are the rendering of the test specimen and the typical panel-to-panel and panel-to girder detail. Do you know of any use of them in copyrighted works?

Thanks

Will Grigg
