Dear Sabithulla Khan

I am pleased to recognize that the chapter, "Islamic Philanthropy and Higher Education: Re-imagining Tradition to Meet Contemporary Challenges" authored by Sabithulla Khan, was accepted and will be published in the following IGI Global scholarly reference book:

Alphin Jr., H.C., Lavine,, J., Stark, S., Hocker, A. (2016). Facilitating Higher Education Growth through Fundraising and Philanthropy. Copyright IGI Global.

IGI Global also acknowledges that the author has full permission to include the same chapter in his upcoming dissertation in both print and electronic formats.

All contributions to IGI Global publications must undergo a rigorous, double blind, peer review after it is assigned a minimum of three noted industry professionals/academicians before a contribution is selected to appear in any IGI Global book or journal. Our editors are given detailed instructions in their "Guide to Editing an IGI Global Book" on setting up the review process and the editor must complete various progress reports and submit to their IGI Global Development Editor throughout the process. This is very important for the assurance of quality. When reviewers are sent chapters/articles to review, they are provided an in-depth review form to help in evaluating the submission, and the reviewer must complete and forward their evaluations to the publication editor within four weeks of receipt of the chapter or journal article.

Publishing in an IGI Global book or journal is a multiple step process, beginning with the submission of a proposal, submission of the article and final submission of the revised article based on reviewer comments. Upon receipt of the evaluations of the reviewers, the book editor notifies all of the authors of the submitted chapters/articles about the results of the review process and forwards the comments received from the reviewers to implement for improvement. At this point the editor will ask the author to revise (if necessary), accept, or reject their submissions. Authors of revised articles are asked to forward the editor a list of their responses to the reviewers' comments and suggestions along with their revised submission.

Since IGI Global was founded in 1987 the high standards followed by our publication editors and international editorial review boards, has allowed the company to be recognized as a leader in information science and technology research publications.

IGI Global books are marketed throughout the world in both print and ebook formats and are on display at many large exhibits such as the book fairs in Frankfurt, Beijing, Malaysia, Guadalajara, American Library Association and London. In addition, many IGI Global publications have been featured in a number of prestigious indices including, but not limited to, Thompson Reuters, Scopus, and INSPEC Bibliographic Databases.

Please feel free to contact me if you need any further clarification about IGI Global quality standards. Thank you for your quality submission to this IGI Global upcoming release.

Sincerely,

Jan Travers

to me

Hi Sabith,

sorry for taking a while to get back.

This *should* be ok. Our concern, on behalf of ISTR, is how much would be identical. Obviously writing for a thesis committee would be different than what (or how) you write your article. I would just ensure that any large chunks of texts are cited as such.

And especially since it will be online and available to all, I would ask that a note be included at the beginning stating that a version of this appeared as an article and then cite the article here as well.

Make sense?

to me

Dear Mr. Khan,

Many thanks for you query.

In regards to using the published article in your dissertation, are you using the entire article or parts of the article? And will your dissertation appear online as part of a university policy?

These answers will (hopefully) help me to guide you in this matter.

Sincerely,

Teresa Krauss

Dear Dr. Enjolras,

I am writing in regards to my article published by Voluntas. I would be including this article in my dissertation ( manuscript) with several other articles. Can I have a letter/ language, so I can have permission, saying I can do this, without violating any of Voluntas guidelines?

Please advise.

Thank you,
Sabith Khan
