

Acknowledgments

Several people helped make this research study possible. First, I would like to acknowledge Dr. Doris Kincade, committee chairperson, who offered her expertise and professionalism, along with an encouraging positive outlook. The committee members gave promptly of their time and gave helpful feedback: Dr. Chen-Yu, through her encouragement and interest in the subject; Dr. Magliaro, by offering feedback in refining the manuscript along with positive comments; Dr. Protinsky, through his willingness to share insights of systems theory and an interest in the subject of eating disorders of females; and Dr. Schofield-Tomschin, by sharing information and providing positive comments. This committee contributed to making the academic process a positive, learning experience.

I spent much time in the Virginia Tech Library and the many staff members there are to be acknowledged for their cheerful and practical help in locating documents and other materials. Particularly, I would like to thank Rosemary Bowden of the reference staff who has given me library assistance and friendship for several years during my time here as a student.

Other support has been given to me by staff and colleagues in the Department of Near Environments. Dove Robertson, secretary of student records, gave continued support and encouragement as well as help with processing academic paperwork. I would also like to acknowledge Jennie Lynn Clevenger, a colleague, who acted as a peer-checker for the area of CT theories and has always given me encouragement to proceed.

Unending encouragement came from my husband Alan Beach. He listened to many hours of ideas, and offered suggestions, food, and provided practical help. I thank him for all of his love and support.
