VITAE

Dawne Raines Burke was born on May 30, 1954 in Martinsburg, West Virginia. Martinsburg is located in Berkeley County, the second oldest county in the State of [West] Virginia created, in 1772, and named for the Colonial Governor of [West] Virginia, Norbourne Berkeley, the Baron de Boutetort (1768 – 1770).

Education: Burke received, in 1995, a Bachelor of Arts in Secondary Education with concentrations in: Music Education, English Literature, and Gender Studies from Shepherd College [now, Shepherd University], which is located in Shepherdstown, West Virginia, the oldest township in [West] Virginia, also located in the Eastern Panhandle of her West Virginia home state. Burke completed, in August 1998, a Master of Arts Degree in Secondary Education with particular emphasis in Social Sciences from the College of Education and Human Resources under the educational aegis of West Virginia University in Morgantown, West Virginia. Under the university's designed curriculum, Burke augmented her previous background with specialized study in: Civil War History and African-American Studies. In September 1999, Burke was accepted as a Doctoral Candidate in the Human Development Program in the College of Liberal Arts and Human Sciences at Virginia Polytechnic Institute & State University. Burke completed the requirements for a Doctor of Philosophy in Human Development in April 2004, for which she was conferred on May 15, 2004.

Experience: Burke has taught for the Berkeley and Jefferson County Public School Systems, and consulted with various parochial schools. For several consecutive years before the program's closure, Burke was the Clinical Instructor for the Dental Assistant Program offered by the James Rumsey Vocational Training Center [now, James Rumsey Technical Institute]. Since that time, Burke has been employed by the Department of Education & Professional Studies, Teacher Education Program, at Shepherd University. Burke is a part-time lecturer to incoming freshmen; and, she has worked for the department, as both a Content Supervisor and Education Field Supervisor, supervising senior students in public classroom environments working toward degree completion. In this capacity, Burke travels extensively throughout the elementary and secondary school systems in the states of: West Virginia, Virginia, and Maryland. Hence, Burke has taught the entire learning spectrum teaching the pre-school learner through the adult "lifelong" learner, which—by her design—exposed her to the graded educational levels: elementary, secondary, vocational, collegiate, and professional through three central access points: (a) public, (b) private, and (c) parochial.

Service: Burke has published on a range of historical, biographical, and social issues largely connected with her ongoing research and public appointments. She is affiliated with: Berkeley County Diversity Committee, Professional Business Women's Association, Crazy Horse Foundation, National Museum For Women in the Arts, Native Indian Society; and, Burke is a Lifelong NAACP Member. In 2001, Burke was appointed by Governor Bob Wise to the West Virginia Women's Commission to serve primarily as a guiding commissioner for: education, gender, adolescence, diversity, and social issues. The state-level commission helps to shape legislative policies through education, advocacy, and research directed by the West Virginia Department of Health and Human Resources under the immediate administration of Secretary Paul Nusbaum. Most recently, Burke was appointed to a federal-level council when Thomas E. Johnston, United States Attorney for the Northern District of West Virginia invited her to become a member of the United States Attorney's Community Advisory Councils.

Dawne Raines Burke is married to attorney, D. Michael Burke, II. The Burkes have two children: a son, D. Michael Burke, III, and, a daughter, Logan Gray Burke.
