

GENDER AND PEST MANAGEMENT IN THE ECUADORIAN ANDES

Megan LeAnna Byrne

Thesis submitted to the faculty of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree of

Master of Public and International Affairs

Maria Elisa Christie
Timothy W. Luke
Ralph P. Hall

March 23, 2011
Blacksburg, Virginia

KEYWORDS: gender, pest management, gendered knowledge, reproductive v.
productive, Ecuador

Copyright 2011

April 5, 2011

To Whom It May Concern:

As a part of the IPM CRSP Megan Byrne has permission to use photos shared on our drive in her thesis, particularly the photo of a yellow sticky trap from Albania.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script that reads "Larry Vaughan".

Dr. Larry J. Vaughan
Associate Program Director, IPM CRSP
Special Assistant to the Director of OIRED
Phone: (540) 231-3893
E-mail: larryjv@vt.edu

April 4th 2011

To Whom It May Concern:

I Andrew Puhl give full consent to Megan Byrne to use any and all of my photos from Ecuador in her thesis and any related publications with adequate notation.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, consisting of a large, stylized 'A' followed by a smaller 'P' and a long, sweeping horizontal line extending to the right.

Andrew Puhl
Global Geil design agency
Photographer
717.977.6513