

CONTENTS

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS. xi

LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS. xiii

Chapter

1.	INTRODUCTION	1
	BACKGROUND OF THE PROBLEM	3
	Brief Historical Unfolding	3
	Storer College in the Context of the Negro College Movement in Post-Civil War America	9
	A Focus For Resourceful Scholarship	10
	Sketch of Storer College	16
	STATEMENT OF THE PROBLEM	26
	PURPOSE OF THE STUDY	28
	RESEARCH QUESTIONS	30
	SIGNIFICANCE	32
	METHOD	34
	Research Method and Data Collection	35
	Research Narratives and Design	37
	Data Analysis	38
	ORGANIZATION	42
2.	EARLY CONTEXTS: THE VIRGINIAS, BEFORE FREE WILL. AND ORGANIZED PHILANTHROPY.	43
	Virginia’s Legal Prerogative on Education	46

	Educational Development in the Virginias: East By West	47
	Development of Education in Western Virginia	52
3.	PHILANTHROPISTS AND FOUNDERS, 1860 – 1865	56
	The American Freedmen’s Union Commission & The AMA	57
	Freedmen’s Bureau	66
	The Emergence of a Movement: A Southern Experiment	67
	Denominational Collaboration: Three Crucial Societies	69
	Home Mission Society (1834)	71
	Anti-Slavery Society (1843)	72
	Woman’s Missionary Society (1847)	73
4.	FOUNDING: BUTLER’S “APPLICATION,” AND THE HARPER’S FERRY MISSION SCHOOL, 1865	76
	Background: Butler’s Property Dispute	78
	[Western] Virginia’s Precursor	83
	The Search for a Mission Base	84
	The Shenandoah Mission	86
	The Mission Site: Harper’s Ferry	88
	Early Days at Harper’s Ferry: Revitalization and Response . . .	94
	Mission Governance: Curtis’ Direction, Brackett’s Supervision.	98
	Aiding the Cause in Harper’s Ferry: Contributions of the Freedmen’s Bureau.	103
	The Mission Teachers at Harper’s Ferry: A Description. . . .	105

	Southern Rules and Preconceptions: Two Teachers' Experiences	108
	Dudley's Exceptional Student	118
5.	THE FOUNDING OF STORER COLLEGE	120
	The Process Begins: The Commission for the Promotion of Education in the South	121
	An Act of Conscience	122
	Choice, and Free Will.	123
	Emancipationist from Birth: Oren Cheney.	126
	The Mission Begins: The Midnight Meeting Between Cheney and Storer	129
	A Benefactor: John Storer.	131
	Storer College's Washington Advocate: William Pitt Fessenden	135
	An Early Advocate of Diversity: James Calder	137
	From The Morning Star to Missioner: Silas Curtis.	139
	A Man For Religious Leadership: Alexander Hatch Morrell	141
	A Superintendent is Chosen: Nathan Cook Brackett.	144
	Funding Begins in Earnest	148
	"Devoted to the Interest of Humanity:" Ebenezer Knowlton	153
	A Propensity for "Incessant Toil": George Tiffany Day.	154
	Pastor and Superintendent: Jonathan McDuffee Brewster	155

	“Right and Reasonable to Serve God”: George Harvey Ball.	157
	From Legal to Religious Studies: Isaac Dalton Stewart	158
	A Family History of Philanthropy: Charles Howard.	160
	In the Middle of the Action in Harper’s Ferry: Daniel Ames.	161
	An Early Contributor: Edward A. Stockman.	163
	Ever an “Active Promoter”: Joseph T. Hoke	167
	The Mission Comes to Fruition: The Opening of Storer College	173
6.	THE PHYSICAL CAMPUS AND THE DEVELOPMENT OF A SECONDARY DIVISION, 1867 – 1884	176
	The Physical Plant: Expanding to Meet the Demands of a Growing Population.	176
	Lockwood House.	181
	Brackett House.	185
	Morrell House.	187
	Anthony House [Memorial Hall]	189
	Lincoln Hall.	193
	Myrtle Hall.	193
	The Normal Department: Creating a New Generation of Educators. . .	198
	The Storer Curriculum: Blending Education and Morality. . .	199
	Storer’s Financial Dedication to Education.	201
	Storer’s Faculty: Education and Morality.	204
	Building a Moral Character: Storer’s Rules of Conduct. . .	205

	From Admission Standards to General Curriculum: A Moral Education.	208
	Storer's Lecture Series: Education by Example.	213
	Evolution: Key Changes During the First Phase of Storer's Existence.	215
7.	SECONDARY EXPANSION, 1884 – 1921.	222
	Consistency Amid Change: Carryovers from Storer's Second Phase of Growth.	222
	Physical Components.	223
	Consistent Financial and Educational Assistance for Students.	224
	Storer's Education of Teachers Continues	230
	New Buildings, New Administration, and New Departments.	235
	Physical Components	235
	Brackett Steps Down: Administrative Changes Occur	244
	Religious Education at Storer.	251
	Musical Education at Storer.	256
	Storer's Answer to a Growing Need.	258
	Storer's Role in Industrial Education	260
	Despite Evolution, Students Remain Loyal.	263
8.	MOVING TOWARD COLLEGIATE STATUS, AND THE GROWING CRISIS, 1921 – 1955	267
	Constancy Amid a Sea of Change: The Physical Campus and the Need for Funding.	268
	The Physical Campus	268

	The Need for Funding Continues	273
	Curricular and Social Changes: Collegiate Status, Pre-Medic Coursework, and The Woman’s Commission	278
	Junior College Status	279
	Pre-Medic Curriculum.	281
	Senior College Status.	283
	The Woman’s Commission	285
	The “Takeover” Debate Rages.	287
	The Great Depression: Education Moves Beyond Reach . .	294
	McDonald: A Paternalistic Perspective	295
	McKinney: The Transition to an Ivy League, Negro Administrator.	297
	Storer After McKinney: School’s Final Days.	306
9.	STORER COLLEGE: THE CLOSING CONTEXT, 1955	312
	Storer’s Future: Two Decisions, Two Proposals, Two Directions. . .	312
	Alderson-Broadus Proposal.	312
	The Zion Proposal.	313
	Building Accountability for a Board: Two Alumni Bring Suit. . . .	315
	A Case for Litigation	317
	Litigants and Liabilities	317
	Moving Forward For the Last Time.	320
	The Campus Reverts to Federal Management.	321
	The Harpers Ferry National Monument.	322
	The National Park Service Steps In.	326

	The Continuing Use of Storer College Campus.	329
10.	SUMMARY.	331
	Storer’s First Phase: 1865 – 1867.	331
	Storer’s Second Phase: 1867 – 1884.	334
	Storer’s Third Phase: 1884 – 1921.	340
	Storer’s Fourth Phase: 1921 – 1954.	346
	CONCLUSIONS.	359
	Epilogue.	361
	APPENDIX A: Storer College National Alumni Association (SCNAA).	362
	APPENDIX B: The Spirit of Storer College Lives On	399
	APPENDIX C: Resource Contributors	404
	APPENDIX D: Possible Reasons for the Demise of Storer College	405
	BIBLIOGRAPHY.	413
	VITAE	464

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The assistance, advice, mentorship, and constructive criticism I received throughout this process can never be repaid; and, at the same time, in my mind's eye, I can still relate to my inner child listening to the voice of my mother, Wanda, saying, "the honest person always pays her debts, no matter how small, or seemingly insignificant." It is these kinds of elusive debts—time, energy, shared humanity, and expertise—to such individuals that I would owe a lifetime of interest-bearing gratitude. Notwithstanding, to six exceptional individuals and others, I, therefore, make an effort for public acknowledgement and recompense:

I owe my most heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Harold W. Stubblefield, the project's co-chair, through whose tutelage my own intellect was greatly challenged for having worked with a scholar of such magnitude with exceptionally high standards, expectations, and by whose example of historical commitment, I was inspired to rise above. Stubblefield, having earned the status of professor emeritus, worked side-by-side with me for three years at his own expense receiving no university subsidy or stipend for his role as co-chair because he believed in the potential of both the project and the person.

Dr. Marcie Boucouvalas, an international scholar in her own right, graciously agreed to co-chair this study with Dr. Stubblefield. Boucouvalas came to the study with an immediate sense of duty to both the subject of research as well as its researcher. It was she who first recognized that this subject was "quite meaningful" to me, and that it should evolve as part of my "life work," as the student and the study began an interconnective process of metamorphosis. Through her mentorship, I have increased respect for the rights and human dignity of others, for the significance and value of their respective histories, and a deeper understanding for their struggle toward educational access and thus personal transformation. Consequently, this phase of my own personal metamorphosis, to such end, has been directly due to her influence and illuminating spirit.

Another professor emeritus, Dr. M. G. "Jerry" Cline, is—what I shall term—the very definition of: research scientist. During the formative stages of this study, Dr. Cline immediately instructed me to explore two longstanding, yet healthy arguments: (a) the national debate between Booker T. Washington and W. E. Burghardt Du Bois; and, (b) the landmark U.S. Supreme Court decision: Brown v. Board of Education, Topeka, Kansas. The depth and degree to which this project sought to piece together the unknown, incongruent "jigsaw" fragments of Storer's history inside this context is due to Cline's influence, knowledge, and vast background experience. His introspective lines of—cultural, societal and racial—questioning demanded that I, quite early, commit to the subject of this study. Any student who has been mentored by Cline has been all the better for having had the privilege. I have never, nor shall I likely encounter his equal in the field of educational research.

Dr. Albert "Bert" Wiswell, Chair of the Department of Human Development under the College of Liberal Arts and Human Sciences, filled an unexpected void in the dissertation committee at a crucial point in the study's development. It was under Dr. Wiswell that I became more closely acquainted with the wholistic concept for exploring the human systems inside the institution. An institutional narrative, quite rightly, demanded a parallel exploration from an organizational schemata. Through this approach, I was better able to understand individual actions set alongside the institution's dynamics, culture, and climate, which brought more fully into view the longue duree of the institution's nine-decade history. For Wiswell's guidance, I am grateful.

My sincerest appreciation, in no small part, is reserved for the last living president in the 90-year history of Storer College, Reverend Doctor Richard Ishmael McKinney who, a nonagenarian and a true sage from another era, faithfully boarded the train alone in Baltimore, Maryland for Virginia Tech's Northern Virginia Campus in Falls Church, Virginia to function not only as a committee examiner but also—and perhaps most importantly—to serve as the primary, internal validator for Storer's institutional narrative. McKinney was an invaluable resource without whose moral leadership, relentless psychological, spiritual, and emotional support during the loneliest of times, the project's momentum may have withered and faded from passion. During a time when hate-crime in America shreds the very threads of our national fabric, and thus undermines the entire body of our American citizenship, it was reassuring to know that Dr. McKinney, an emeritus African-American college president, considered me, a white, female doctoral student, worthy of his best effort, concentration, and mentorship. Together, we learned a great deal about ourselves, our humanity, and the great divide associated with America's continuing endeavor to appreciate its racial and ethnic diversity. We, in the end, constructed the bridge to greater understanding through mutual trust, and therefore our human dignity.

An invaluable resource throughout this project has been Dr. Jennifer Mooney, who patiently critiqued, edited, and made several valuable structural suggestions along the way. She offered constructive feedback, posed thought-provoking and often disturbing questions, and who encouraged me to move beyond the “smooth surface of text” in order to expose the deeper inevitably surreptitious issues that are indeed inextricably interlocked with archival, literary and textual analyses. The writing process could not have maintained its ambitious momentum without Mooney's constant reminder that “accomplishment is best assured to those who endeavor to persevere.”

There are several others who along the way contributed in varying and differing degrees to this endeavor. Mary Kathleen Ernst who helped me find not only the music inside but also the voice. Dr. Sylvia Bailey Shurbutt who taught me that, by necessity, I would have to learn to become my “own ruthless editor;” Dr. Betty Ellzey who taught me that the English language is architecture under the most painful of circumstances for which I am indeed thankful; and, Dr. Lee Keebler demonstrated that aptly placed self-motivation and self-discipline are the greatest demands for serious writing. Local and state supporters included: David Porterfield and Keith Hammersla, Martinsburg-Berkeley County Public Library; Don Woods, Berkeley County Historical Society; General Staff, Jefferson County Historical Society; Ann Hendriksson, Laura Neal, and Nancy Roesel, Scarborough Library, Shepherd University; Michele Eldredge, Lucy Cox, Deborah Cash, and Harry Kriz, Newman Library, Virginia Polytechnic Institute & State University. Several federal-level contributors included: Mary Robinson, Michael D. Watson, Nancy Hatcher, Carrie Ravenhorst, Richard Raymond, and Becky Sollars, Harper's Ferry National Historic Park. Curators and archivists supporting the project include: Anne Bowers, Bowling Green State University; Dr. Deborah Van Broeckhoven, American Baptist Historical Society, Valley Forge; Dr. John A. Cuthbert West Virginia & Regional History, West Virginia University; Dr. Thomas Mann, Jefferson Library, Library of Congress; D. Michael Burke, III for transcribing when my eyes could go no longer; Beverly Clark Carlson, the former Executive Archivist of the American Baptist Historical Society, Colgate University, who was the earliest and most convincing advocate for this project; The Girls; and, Lawrence W. Schultz, Lacy Godby, and Sandra Yost of Burke, Schultz, Harman & Jenkinson; Chris Prichard, Valerie, and Rick OfficeMax; James and Shirley Tolbert for sharing their valuable time to clarify and inform underlying social, political, and racial subjects of this project over the past five years; Dr. Ancella Bickley who was a living, breathing example of historical integrity, as she impressed upon me the importance to recognize that all people have value, all people have histories, all people need to familiarize themselves with those histories in order to appreciate our deepest and most basic connection: our humanity.

LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS

ABHMS	American Baptist Home Mission Society
AC	Amistad Committee
AFUC	American Freedmen's Union Commission
AMA	American Missionary Association
AMEZC	African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church
BHMS	Baptist Home Mission Society
CWIM	Committee for the West Indian Missions
FB	Freedmen's Bureau
FWB	Free Will Baptist
FWBHMS	Free Will Baptist Home Mission Society
HFNHP	Harper's Ferry National Historic Park
NAACP	National Association for the Advancement of Colored People
SCA	Storer College Archives
UMS	Union Missionary Society
USCC	United States Christian Commission
USSC	United States Sanitary Commission
WABHMS	Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society
WEMS/WAAI	Western Evangelical Missionary Society for Work Among American Indians